A Letter from My Thai-Isan Coworker

Baaw Ter Shares His Heart with Us!

By Ron Myers

Dear Uncle Ron and Friends, (Baaw Ter also calls me "Dad," being his spiritual mentor and many years his senior.)

Baaw Ter and Joo during their first reconciliation talk a few weeks ago

BT writes: I praise God and would also like to thank everyone for their great love; all the brothers and sisters in Christ who prayed for us because today, I have received some very good news.

My dear wife Joo stopped by our home again to visit. She waited 4 hours for me while I was out running errands. When I returned, we talked at length, during which time she broke down and sobbed, asking for forgiveness for everything, including making me sad and for causing a lot of undue trouble, for which I forgave her. Joo went on to say that she really wants to come back together again as a family, to start a life afresh in our home, but asked for a little time to adjust.

Previously, during our first talk, Joo told me she would accept the fact that I had left Buddhism and had become a Christian, and that she would try to understand. Praise God! I consider this a great turn of events and hope that she too will accept Christ. Again, I want to thank all you brothers and sisters in Christ who have prayed for us. What once seemed impossible now looks very probable, thanks to God.

I'll share more good news when Joo comes back. She presently resides in the hospital dorm [where she is one of the head nurses]. Meanwhile, I need to be more conscientious and prepare for her return, being as kind and loving as I can, with God's help. Please continue to pray for us. I'm so happy, Uncle Ron. Praise God.

May God Bless You All in The Name of Jesus. Amen.

Baaw Ter and Joo during this reconciliation talk

Baaw Ter later added a few things to his initial letter—translated below:

BT: May God prepare the way. Joo also mentioned the audio narration of the Isan New Testament, that I needed to get it done. Amen! I explained to her about the audio recording, saying that it was over half done, despite various unforeseen setbacks. She also asked about you, Uncle Ron. I told her that you will be coming in August, to which Joo said she was glad. I miss you a lot, "Dad." I feel that you are always by my side. You don't give up on anything, much less this matter. Please pray that Joo would see God in me every day until she surrenders her life to Him. I am very happy. God is the greatest. Amen.

Ron: BT, concerning unforeseen setbacks, do you remember that I said, if you help me with this audio narration of the Isan New Testament, that we would face spiritual battles. But we won't give up or quit because God is on our side and we are on His, doing His will in getting His Word to the Isan people. We press on in the strength of His wisdom and might, not in our own strength.

BT: Yes, I remember.

Ron: This is also a very important time for Joo, that she will resist the old way; turn, and entrust herself to God's care, in Christ.

BT: Yes, but she needs a little time.

Ron: Of course. But as you said, she seems a lot more mellow lately. We need to continually hold her up before God in prayer.

BT: Yes. She also wants to spend some time away together. So, on the 18-20 we'll vacation somewhere together along with our son DJ.

Ron: Great! We here will continue to pray for you, believing that God's will be accomplished for you two.

BT: Please pray for my daily radio talk show as well, that it will flourish and support us through new advertisers.

Ron: I am confident that it will, more now than ever. I have always believed God will provide for you through it.

BT: Amen! I too feel the same way.

UPDATE: Baaw Ter just called me rejoicing, saying that Joo brought most of her things back home last night, and spent the night there. He said she was so tired that she fell asleep almost immediately, but not before they had a positive chat. He said they shared equal blame, but that it's over now and we're starting anew. He prayed over her as she slept, asking God to save her, then he slept on the couch.
